Pueblo City Schools Budget

I know I am supposed to be doing a part two column regarding charter schools, but I'm just too fired up to not provide you with this column...

As you are probably aware, Pueblo City Schools face a budget deficit of somewhere over $5 million this year. Good or bad, the district has proposed cuts to cover the shortfall.

The PUEBLO CHIEFTAIN, in last Friday's editorial about this very subject said: "No one in government ever seems to want to make necessary cuts, but by necessity as fiduciary officers of the public's money, the school board must make these decisions. Dr. Covington and his staff have presented what we believe is an honest picture of the district's finances. Now it's up to the board members to bite the bullet and make the tough decisions - decisions they were elected to make."

I guess it's also up to our local paper to take a completely gutless stand, support cuts to education, and kick it back to the School Board to, as they said, bite the bullet. Suddenly, the Board and District's primary job is to manage money. Funny, I thought their job was to educate our kids, and I thought it was our responsibility to provide the funding for that purpose. As I suspect is the case with most people in Pueblo, I did not elect the Board members to cut education to the bone, increase class sizes and decrease the number of teachers, which are the two items that make up the largest percentage of cuts. The Board that we have now is a "kids first" Board, and that is why they are elected.

However, the Chieftain chooses to take the popular road, appealing to the public's belief that all government wastes money and just wants to spend, spend, spend. That wouldn't be so bad if that same editorial space hadn't been used in the past to sharply criticize the district for not providing a quality education to our kids. This is akin to the guy who buys a Yugo and then can't understand and continually complains about it not being as good as his neighbor's Volvo. Just like a Yugo, a poorly funded education may get you to the end destination, but the passengers of that "Yugo" system will not have experienced the same trip as those in a well-funded program.

In the same editorial, the Chieftain quotes David Aldag, Chair of the budget oversight committee, and a financial officer for a local company, as saying: "there are a lot of companies that have gone through things like this and have flourished." What kind of idiotic statement is that? Corporations can reduce services and increase profits. What is the profit of our schools? It is producing kids that will be competitive and productive members of society. Can we increase that profit by cutting costs? Only in Mr. Aldag's and the Chieftain's dreams. Believe you me, if Volvo could produce their quality product for the cost of a Yugo, they'd be doing it.

So do I have a solution? You bet your butt I do. And it's facing the hard reality and not taking the lame position of the Chieftain, Mr. Aldag, or President Bush the first, for that matter. But I'll borrow from his famous one-liner:

Read my lips: RAISE TAXES.

Don't like those words? Truth be told, neither do I. But when faced with the hard reality of either paying some more money or sacrificing a quality education for our kids, is there any other choice? Appealing to the cheapskate mentality is the easy path of least resistance. So if we want the Board to "bite the bullet and make the tough choices," let's let them do that and propose a mill levy increase.

It's gonna take about a 20% increase to bring us back on track. For the average homeowner in Pueblo with a $1,200 tax bill, that's around $120 per year; ten bucks a month. (I'm okay with the math, School taxes account for about half of your total tax bill.) For low-income taxpayers, it's less than $50 per year. And no, I'm not advocating a carte blanche spending authority. Efficiencies and reform still need to be looked at. But increasing class size? Who would fly in the face of every educational theory and voice support for that? Well, I guess the Chieftain's editor and our budget oversight chair would.

Guess I wouldn't get a lot of votes if I were to run for school board, eh? But people need to hear that truth, whether it hurts or not.

My dad always said, put up or shut up. And I'll offer that tidbit to the Chieftain.

That said, I'll write my $100 check and send it to Dr. Covington this week. Anybody else have the guts to do the same? Feel free to join me. And maybe the Chieftain can match those dollar for dollar? Or quit whining.

Have a Great Pueblo Week!

Microsoft suffers latest blow as NIST bans 'Vista'

By Paul McDougall
InformationWeek

InfoWk 3/12 – In a new setback to Microsoft's public sector business, the influential National Institute of Standards and Technology has banned the software maker's Windows Vista operating system from its internal computing networks, according to an agency document obtained by InformationWeek.

Tech staffers at NIST, a part of the Department of Commerce charged with promulgating technology standards, are scheduled to meet on April 10 in Gaithersburg, Md., to discuss their concerns about the new operating system, which Microsoft released to consumers in January amid much fanfare and to businesses in December with lesser flair.

According to the formal agenda for the meeting, NIST technology workers will attend a session entitled "Windows Vista Security" to discuss "the current ban of this operating system on NIST networks." NIST officials weren't immediately available to comment.

Word of NIST's Windows Vista ban comes a week after InformationWeek revealed that the U.S. Department of Transportation and the Federal Aviation Administration have both imposed similar blackouts on the operating system, as well as on Microsoft Office 2007 and Internet Explorer 7.

FAA CIO Dave Bowen told InformationWeek that he may forego upgrading the aviation safety agency's computers to Microsoft's latest offerings in favor of desktops running some combination of Linux and Google Apps, Google's new online suite of office productivity tools.

Among other things, Bowen said he is concerned that Windows Vista may be incompatible with many software applications already in use at the FAA.

This month's topic will be on the "Capital Program" and will be presented by Tracy Martinez from US Bank.

This seminar is designed to help participants learn more about a benefit that is offered to our membership to help your business grow and be successful. In October of 2003, US Bank, the US Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, and local Hispanic Chambers of Commerce, created the revenue-sharing "Capital Program." This program was designed to provide improved access to financing for small business members of Hispanic chambers, increase membership, and provide new revenue streams for USB, the USHCC, and local HCCs. By attending this interactive lunch seminar, you can learn more information on how the Capital Program can benefit you and your business. Bring a sack lunch to 215 South Victoria Avenue. The Latino Chamber of Commerce will provide beverages and dessert. There is no charge for LCC members and the cost for nonmembers is $5. Please RSVP by Tuesday, March 20, by calling LCC at (719) 542-5513.
