BLM Colorado's February oil and gas lease sale nets $3.9 million

BLM 2/14 – Thursday, the BLM Colorado State Office sold all 35 parcels offered at its quarterly oil and gas lease sale, totaling 27,494 acres of public lands. The high bid, for a 45-acre parcel in Garfield County, was $3,100 per acre; the high total bonus bid was $864,000, for a 360-acre parcel, also in Garfield County. The sale earned $3.9 million in proceeds, of which 48 percent will go to the State of Colorado. The State received $123 million in FY 2007 from royalties, rentals and bonus bid payments for all federal minerals (including coal).

"Natural gas production from Colorado's federal lands continues to play an important role in meeting the nation's energy needs," said Duane Spencer, BLM Colorado Acting Deputy State Director for Energy, Lands and Minerals. "Our focus is on smart up-front planning, solid implementation of best practices and working with industry to reduce environmental impacts."

Land-use plans, which govern all BLM-managed lands, involve an extensive environmental review process that determines which lands will be available for specific uses, and what conditions will be applied to minimize impacts. The public has opportunities to provide input throughout the process. BLM also consults with other federal, State and local agencies, environmental groups and industry throughout the land-use planning process.

When preparing or revising land-use plans, or when parcels are nominated for leasing, the BLM considers available new information to determine whether any significant new circumstance or impact has occurred since the completion of the most recent land-use plan. The parcels offered for lease in this sale were analyzed individually to determine whether the existing environmental analysis was adequate.

Leases for oil and gas development come with general requirements to protect the environment from adverse impacts; additional site-specific stipulations are also included, such as limits on seasons when drilling can occur and restrictions on surface occupancy by oil and gas operators. These stipulations protect resources and values such as wildlife habitat and scenic vistas. Once an operator proposes exploration or development on a BLM-issued lease, the Bureau conducts further environmental analysis to determine what impact-limiting measures are needed.

"Protections are in place to minimize potential impacts from oil and gas exploration, development and

RECLAMATION Managing Water in the West

DOCUMENTS AVAILABILITY ANNOUNCEMENT Southern Delivery System

The United States Bureau of Reclamation is preparing a Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) for the proposed Southern Delivery System (SDS) project. The proposed SDS is a regional water delivery project. The project would use the excess storage capacity of Pueblo Reservoir and a pipeline to deliver water to the communities of Colorado Springs, Fountain, Security, and Pueblo West.

A DEIS is anticipated to be released for public review in late February 2008 and public meetings will be held thereafter. In advance of the DEIS release, Reclamation is making a variety of supporting documents available for public review. These documents provide much of the technical background for the forthcoming DEIS.

The documents have been posted to the project website (www.sdseis.com). Persons interested in the technical content of the forthcoming DEIS may want to review one or more of the documents in advance of the DEIS release.

For more information on the SDS EIS, please contact Kara Lamb, Bureau of Reclamation at (970) 215-9545 or visit www.sdseis.com

Available Documents

These available documents describe the affected environment (existing conditions) or environmental consequences (potential SDS effects) for the following resource areas:

- Hydrology
- Water Resources
- Geomorphology
- Water Quality
- Aquatic Resources
- Wetlands, Waters of the U.S., and Riparian Resources
- Vegetation
- Wildlife
- Recreation
- Socioeconomics
- Hazardous Materials

Comments on the technical documents should be submitted to Reclamation concurrently with comments on the DEIS. Reclamation will provide future notices of the availability of the DEIS and the public review process. Reclamation welcomes all comments.

Earth Talk ... Q&A

From the Editors of E/The Environmental Magazine

Dear EarthTalk: I heard a reference to "Earth-friendly chocolate" and was wondering about what goes into chocolate that would raise environmental concerns.

— Ben Moran, Providence, RI

Like coffee beans, the cacao seeds from which we derive chocolate can only be grown successfully in equatorial regions—right where the world's few remaining tropical rainforests thrive. As worldwide demand for chocolate grows, so does the temptation among growers to clear more and more rainforest to accommodate high-yield monocultural (single-crop) cacao tree plantations. What are left are open, sunny fields with dramatically lower levels of plant and animal diversity. Adding environmental insult to injury, most cacao plantations use copious amounts of chemical fertilizers, pesticides and fungicides that further degrade the land that once teemed with a wide variety of rare birds, mammals and plants.

Another problem with chocolate production, although not specifically an environmental concern, is the conditions endured by workers that pick and process the cacao seeds. The International Institute of Tropical Agriculture has documented some 284,000 children between the ages of nine and 12 working in hazardous conditions on West African cacao farms. In Africa's Ivory Coast, for example, where more than 40 percent of the world's cacao is grown, underage cacao workers are routinely over

Earth Talk ... Q&A's

development on private land during the latter half of the 20th century. More than 1,600 land trusts have since sprung up in a variety of communities across the U.S. Together they have protected some 37 million acres of land, according to the Land Trust Alliance, a Washington, DC-based umbrella group formed in 1981 to help land trusts share information and work more effectively.

When a land trust acquires land, it may retain ownership in perpetuity in order to protect the parcel from development. When landowners donate parcels to a land trust outright, they can take advantage of state and federal income tax deductions—similar to any tax-deductible, non-profit donation—while saving considerable money on property and estate taxes moving forward.

Whether a land trust buys a parcel or gets it donated, it can either hold onto the property or, depending on the arrangement with the former owner, sell it to a third party—often a local or state government that commits to turning it into a protected area. Land trusts also sell land to private buyers, usually with strict restrictions on future development. The benefit to keeping the land under private ownership is that it can then stay on local property tax rolls and thus continue to provide revenue for the local government.

Another way land trusts work is through "conservation easements," whereby individuals can protect their land but still retain ownership and the option of selling or passing it along to heirs. Future owners of the land are also bound by the easement's terms, which restrict development and use and are often monitored by a land trust. Conservation easements usually lower the financial value of their land (by limiting development potential), but landowners benefit because their property taxes go down accordingly. Likewise, if and when heirs inherit the land, the conservation easement lessens their estate tax burden.

Every conservation easement is different, but most include provisions limiting or forbidding construction or resource extraction. Often they protect especially sensitive lands such as wetlands. Some easements allow specific parcels to be used for agriculture, ranching or logging. Many allow hiking, camping, bird watching or even hunting (though some specifically ban hunting and are created for that purpose).

Another nonprofit group, the American Land Conservancy (ALC), functions like a national land trust working nationwide to ensure that large or exceptional pieces of property stay out of the hands of developers. Some of ALC's work has led to the creation or expansion of national parks in Colorado, Hawaii and elsewhere.

Dear EarthTalk: Is it possible to landscape my property in a green-friendly way? I would like to create a more natural and wildlife-friendly backyard, but I don't want to break the bank doing it. Are there any tax incentives for completing such projects? — Michal Avraham, Olive Branch, MS

One common misperception about adopting green practices around the home is that doing so will cost more money. But this may be true only in the short run. There are certainly some up-front outlays to converting a conventional backyard into a more environmentally friendly space (like any landscaping job), but homeowners should be able to make their money back within a few years through savings on their water and yard service bills alone.

Landscapes designed with the principles of nature and wildlife habitat in mind are often referred to as "naturescapes" (or "xeriscapes" when they also require little water to maintain). They usually replace most lawn grass and instead populate space with native plants that are attractive to wildlife for food or shelter.

According to the nonprofit PlantNative, maintaining a green backyard can cost up to 90 percent less than keeping up a traditional lawn-based landscape. "Since naturescapes effectively take care of themselves, there is little or no maintenance and hence little or no maintenance cost," says the group. The average American lawn costs about $700 yearly to maintain, says PlantNative, which also points out that the average household lawnmower is used upwards of 40 hours a year, the equivalent of a full work week.

Melissa Santiago, a researcher with Ohio State University who authored a fact sheet on the benefits of managing property for wildlife, couldn't agree more: "Maintaining wildlife habitat or other natural areas can be a cost-effective approach to land management." She recommends that landowners with room to spare plant one or more rows of native trees and shrubs as so-called "shelterbelts" that provide wildlife habitat and also provide shade in summer (to reduce air conditioning costs) and wind resistance in winter (they have been shown to reduce heating costs by as much as 30 percent).

Tax breaks for greening up your residential landscape are few and far between, but do exist. The state of Indiana offers tax breaks to landowners who convert a minimum of 15 acres over to habitat suitable for native wildlife. Many other state governments offer landowners similar assistance for maintaining habitat for threatened wildlife. And municipalities across the arid southwestern U.S. offer various incentives for homeowners who cut water use, whether through xeriscaping or any other means.

To get started converting your yard over, contact a local nursery well-versed in native landscaping to lend some informal or professional expertise. To find a nursery in your area that fits the bill, consult PlantNative's free online directory of native plant nurseries. Or, if you want to do your own homework, check out the National Wildlife Federation's free online Native Plant Guide (which covers the 50 U.S. states) or the Canadian Wildlife Federation's guidebook Backyard Habitat for Canada's Wildlife (available in print for $19.95 plus shipping).

Cyrus apology brings attention to the import of seat belt use

DENVER — Colorado safety advocates are stressing the importance of buckling up, in light of a recent seat belt mistake involving teen pop star Miley Cyrus. The famous 15-year-old and her father, Billy Ray Cyrus, were called out for not wearing seat belts in a scene from her 3-D concert movie, which is now in theaters. The Cyrus' issued an apology and emphasized the importance of wearing seat belts.

The controversy comes as law enforcement in 11 Colorado counties gear up for the next Click It or Ticket mobilization, set for March 3-9. The Click It or Ticket enforcement is aimed at saving more lives by buckling down on all Colorado motorists not buckled up, especially teenagers.

In 2006 in Colorado, 66 teen drivers and passengers, ages 16 to 20, were killed in motor vehicle crashes and nearly three-fourths of those (45) teens were not buckled up. This is higher than the national percentage of unrestrained teens killed in motor vehicle crashes. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), 58% (2,813) of teen passenger vehicle occupants killed in 2006 (4,842), ages 16 to 20, were unrestrained at the time of the fatal crash.

"The goal of enforcement is to save lives and protect the future of Colorado," said Colonel Mark Trostel, Chief of the Colorado State Patrol. "No matter who you are, wearing a seat belt is the smartest thing you can do to survive a crash. We hope that adults and celebrities will set good examples, so that young people realize that their future depends on making good choices like buckling up on every trip."

The Colorado State Patrol and 41 law enforcement agencies in Adams, Arapahoe, Boulder, Denver, Douglas, El Paso, Jefferson, Larimer, Mesa, Pueblo and Weld counties will participate in the enforcement effort. The enforcement mobilization is paid for by a special grant from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to fund four Click It or Ticket enforcement waves and educational outreach to teenagers.

The latest enforcement wave occurred Jan. 14-20, 2008 and resulted in 4,301 seat belt citations.

BLM's oil and gas lease sale nets $3.9 million

production." said Spencer. "It's important to remember that energy development and protection of natural resources are not mutually exclusive. BLM ensures that the development of energy resources is done in an environmentally sound manner on all lands we manage." BLM Colorado notifies the public of each land sale through the media, internet and other means. Anyone may file a protest on a parcel nominated for inclusion in a lease sale; however, all protests must contain the specific serial number of the parcel being protested and must have been received via mail or fax at the Colorado State Office by 4 p.m. (close of business), on January 30, 2007 to be considered. This policy allows the Bureau to review protests in advance of the sale, provides for an appropriate announcement of protests at the sale, and helps the agency meet its statutory deadline for issuing leases. All parcels in this sale were protested. Protested parcels are still offered for bid, although bidders are notified that BLM will not issue a lease until the protests are resolved.

BLM manages more than 8 million acres of public lands for multiple uses in Colorado, as well as over 27 million acres of sub-surface mineral estate. The Mineral Leasing Act of 1920 and the 1987 Federal Onshore Oil and Gas Leasing Reform Act authorize leasing of federal oil and gas resources; the 1987 law, which amended the Mineral Leasing Act, requires each BLM state office to conduct oil and gas lease sales on at least a quarterly basis where there is an interest in such sales. The degree of interest is driven by market demands. In addition to overseeing mineral leasing on BLM public lands, the Bureau also administers mineral leasing on all other federal lands.

Under the 1976 Federal Land Policy and Management Act, the BLM's multiple-use mission is to sustain the health and productivity of the public lands for the use and enjoyment of present and future generations. The BLM accomplishes this by managing such activities as outdoor recreation, livestock grazing, energy production and mineral development, and by conserving natural, historical, cultural and other resources on the public lands. •
