BLM May 8 oil & gas lease sale information available

BLM 3/7 – The Bureau of Land Management (BLM) Colorado on Friday announced that it will offer to lease for oil and gas development 133 parcels including approximately 175,430 acres at its quarterly oil and gas lease sale on May 8, 2008.

The sale will include 144,090 acres of U.S. Forest Service land in the San Luis Valley. BLM acts as the leasing agent for mineral rights on all federal lands. The decision to make Forest Service lands available for lease is made in the applicable Forest Service Plan, with the BLM managing the sale of the leases.

“The Forest Service parcels proposed for lease in the May lease sale may be of concern to some of the public, so we will have an open meeting in Del Norte to discuss the process and answer questions,” said Dan Dallas, Forest Supervisor/Center Manager for the San Luis Valley Public Lands Center.

“There are currently oil and gas leases on BLM land in the San Luis Valley, but the last parcel leased on the Rio Grande National Forest was in 1994,” Dallas said. “We plan on making a concerted effort to bring the public up to date on our land use planning and the BLM’s leasing policy.”

The sale also includes eight parcels in Jackson County that were deferred from BLM’s November 2007 lease sale to allow the BLM to perform additional analysis and community outreach. The additional analysis was to identify impacts to sage grouse habitat and recreation areas along the Colorado River.

“We have worked with the local county and city officials since November to hold public meetings and provide as much information as possible about the oil and gas leasing program,” said Dave Stout, Field Manager in BLM’s Kremmling Field Office, which oversees the BLM land in Jackson County.

Stout said that one of the key points he and his staff emphasized in the public sessions was an explanation of split-estate lands, where a private entity owns the surface rights and the federal government owns the subsurface mineral rights. Mineral rights include the right to access subsurface minerals.

“Some people may be unaware of this when they buy land,” Stout said. “We explained to them that if the mineral rights are reserved by the federal government, they can check this through examining the title insurance at the title company and the deed on file at the local courthouse. They should find out what the plan is for their area. The BLM must consider the public interest in terms of the federal mineral estate, not only the desires of surface owners.”

The lease sale will offer parcels in 14 counties (some parcels overlap county lines) including:

- Dolores, 348 acres
- Garfield, 523 acres
- Huerfano, 1080 acres
- Jackson, 7,234 acres
- Mesa, 2,060 acres
- Moffat, 12,702 acres
- Montezuma, 280 acres
- Montrose, 80 acres
- Morgan, 640 acres
- Rio Grande, 109,562 acres
- Routt, 1,280 acres
- Saguache, 36,404
- San Miguel, 2,438 acres
- Weld, 800 acres

“Of the total acreage managed by the BLM, less than one percent experiences surface disturbance from oil and gas activity,” said Acting BLM Colorado Deputy State Director Duane Spencer. “To minimize impacts to the land, the Bureau analyzes the potential environmental effects from exploration and development before offering any leases for sale.”

The federal government has paid $2.39 billion in mineral royalties, bonus payments and rental fees to Colorado since 1922. In 2007, the state received $123 million in federal mineral payments.

Statewide, BLM accounts for about 10 percent of new oil and gas leasing activity. In 2007, the state of Colorado processed 6,386 applications for drilling permits, of which 827 were on federal lands or subsurface mineral holdings. The rest of the wells are on state-owned or private lands. •

CSU/Pueblo students give second bronzed wolf statue to campus

CSU/Pueblo 3/8 — Visitors to the Colorado State University-Pueblo campus will find a new guardian of sorts in the form of a howling wolf statue guarding a knoll on the east side of campus. King of the Hill, as the statue is nicknamed, was purchased and gifted to the University by the Student Facility Fee Committee and installed last week. Lighting will be completed in the coming weeks.

The life-sized wolf is made of cast aluminum with a bronzed-tone finish. It stands approximately 45 inches from the base to the tip of his nose and weighs about 80 pounds. The students chose to have the wolf be life size, so that it would actually "fit into" the natural setting. The purchase of the statue from Rocky Mountain Materials, Inc., in Colorado Springs and installation totaled just over $5,275.

Amanda Cristelli, vice president of Associated Students' Government and a member of the Student Facility Fee Committee, said students were looking for ways to establish the University's identity as Thunderwolves.

"We wanted something to greet visitors to campus and to connect with our mascot, with our identity," Cristelli said.

The Student Facility Fee Committee funds projects across campus that benefit students and involve improvement and beautification of campus from student fee dollars collected for this purpose. For example, the asphalt walkways near the Technology Building will be replaced with concrete sidewalks thanks to these student fee dollars.

This is the second such gift from students. In January of 2004, students commemorated the University's name change from University of Southern Colorado to Colorado State University-Pueblo with the donation of a 40-inch high, 140-pound bronzed wolf statue by sculptor Brenda Daniher that is mounted on a rock southeast of the Fountain Plaza area on campus.

Colorado State University/Pueblo is a regional, comprehensive university emphasizing professional, career-oriented, and applied programs. Displaying excellence in teaching, celebrating diversity, and engaging in service and outreach, CSU-Pueblo is distinguished by access, opportunity, and the overall quality of services provided to its students.
