News, Views ... Whatever !!

2B or not 2B and Other Local Issues...

In addition to the myriad state items on the ballot this year, there are several local issues as well.

From the column title, there is Question 2B, which is for the expansion of the Pueblo Convention Center. Last year we voted an approval to do the expansion, but we managed to not approve the funding. In the time that has passed, neither Warren Buffet nor the Tooth Fairy have provided us with the funding.

Question 2B provides for that funding by using the 'retailer fee' from the local sales tax. It doesn't raise local sales tax rates that you and I pay. The city just continues to keep the 3.3% of the tax that would have been credited back to merchants. Most of the opposition to this is regarding the need to expand the convention center and not the funding. In reality, this is an ideal time to expand any infrastructure in the area. Funding rates are very reasonable and due to the downturn in construction, I'd expect we will see very competitive bidding on this project. In other words, we'll get more bang for our buck and besides, infrastructure projects are great for our local economy. Not to mention the ability of the Convention Center to host more events and provide better services.

So, this is a YES in my book and it should be in yours as well.

Question 2A

Rolling backwards to question 2A, this would increase "Maximum penalties for violating ordinances and charter provisions - dedicating the amount by which any fine exceeds $300.00 to graffiti control and other law enforcement activities". In the past, I've not supported this issue, partly because I believe a 333% increase is bizarre and partly because there are no specifics to what offenses will carry what penalty. I'd love to see the fines for graffiti be $1000 or more. On the other hand, there are a host of city ordinances where a major penalty is not warranted. In fact, there are many on the books today that don't warrant the current $150 or $300 numbers attached to them.

So, as I have in the past, I give this one a NO. Come back with a $1,000 or $2,000 fine for graffiti and I think it would pass by over 90%.

Question 200

This one is basically a re-hash of one that I had mixed feelings about last time, but under the circumstances of that time, supported. In a nutshell, it creates a Economic Development Negotiating Committee that would take over many of the responsibilities now being handled by PEDCO. It adds additional oversight, and requires more public disclosures.

Well, the past is the past, and I've put it behind me. PEDCO has gone through a considerable transformation under the leadership of Keith Swerdfeger and definitely looks like it is on the right track. Let's give them a chance to continue on the right path before we create more government. This one gets a NO for now.

Question 201

This is another one that sounds fairer than it is. It basically orders City Council to hold a public forum before their regular meeting and to televise that forum. That's all fine and good but much of the public comment is devoted to citizens presenting personal issues that few if anyone else has interest in. Secondly, this just creates a free press conference for the usual players that show up at any public meeting they can. If they really have something of interest, I'm sure the local TV stations would be happy to pick it up and they'd get a far larger audience. This one gets a NO — we don't need it.

Economy in crisis

Some of you may be wondering why I'm not commenting on our economic crisis. As much as I'd love to chat about the crisis, there are two main reasons I don't. First, I like to keep this on a local level. >From talking to local bankers, most are saying it is business as usual. Second, the situation is too fluid to write about in a weekly paper. I write the article several days before you receive your paper and, as we've seen in the past few weeks, the economic world can change drastically in a few days. My hope is that this will all settle down and we can get back to business.

Next I'll tackle the local school issues and give you a 'lightning round' of my election picks... and I'll probably be as controversial as Mad Money's Jim Kramer.

Have a Great Pueblo Week!

PERSPECTIVE by Jon Heaton, Tribune editor

These are the times...
With just a little over two weeks until Election Day, those like myself, who have always gone to the polls to register our choices, are now wondering why we haven't ever voted early. I tell my friends that I enjoy visiting my polling place to talk to neighbors and to find out how many have voted ahead of me, etc. The truth is, I worry that if something unexpected were to occur to change my mind after I had voted early, I wouldn't be able to change my ballot.

would keep me from voting on Election Day. So thank goodness we can all vote early starting Monday, Oct. 20 and right on through Halloween, both at 1001 N. Santa Fe Avenue downtown and at the State Fair Events Center on the south side. ID is required for early voting, such as a driver's license.

If you didn't notice...

If you didn't notice that we forgot to update the Continued Log of Public Trustee Sales in last week's issue (page 5), you aren't alone. Very few readers brought this oversight to my attention. Perhaps they didn't want to hurt my feelings. We will redouble our efforts to get it right (for awhile). In the meantime, we'll probably forget something else. Again, our apologies. jfh

This view is probably silly because no personal or natural catastrophe I can imagine is likely to alter my outlook that much. On the other hand, something COULD happen that

Earth Talk ... Q&A

From the Editors of E/The Environmental Magazine

DEAR EARTHTALK: I've suddenly been seeing a lot of those tiny "Smart Cars" around. Who makes them and what is their fuel efficiency? And I'm all for fuel efficiency, but are these cars safe?—David Yu, Bend, OR

Originally the brainchild of Lebanese-born entrepreneur/inventor Nicolas Hayek of Swatch watch fame, Smart Cars are designed to be small, fuel-efficient, environmentally responsible and easy to park—really the ultimate in-city vehicle. Back in 1994, Hayek and Swatch signed on with Daimler-Benz (the German maker of the venerable Mercedes line of cars) to develop the unique vehicle; in fact, the company name Smart is derived from a combination of the words Swatch, Mercedes and the word "art."

When initial sales were slower than hoped for, Hayek and Swatch pulled out of the venture, leaving Daimler-Benz full owner (today Smart is part of Mercedes car division). Meanwhile, rising oil prices have driven up demand for Smart vehicles, and the company began selling them in the U.S. earlier this year.

Measuring just a hair over 8 feet long and less than five feet wide, the company's flagship "ForTwo" model (named for its human carrying capacity) is about half the size of a traditional car. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) rates the car's fuel efficiency at 33 miles per gallon (mpg) for city driving and 41 mpg on the highway (although actual drivers report slightly lower results). Three ForTwos with bumpers to the curb can fit in a single parallel parking spot.

And with soaring gas prices, the cars have been selling like hotcakes in the U.S. The company's U.S. distributor is working on importing an additional 15,000 cars before the end of 2008, as its initial order of 25,000 vehicles is almost depleted. Some four dozen Mercedes Benz dealers across the country have long waiting lists for new Smart vehicles, which sell for upwards of $12,000.

As for safety, the ForTwo did well enough in crash tests by the independent Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS) to earn the group's highest rating—five tars—thanks to the car's steel racecar-style frame and liberal use of high-tech front and side airbags. Despite such good safety performance for such a tiny car, IIHS testers caution that larger, heavier cars are inherently safer than smaller ones.

Beyond safety concerns, some analysts bemoan the ForTwo's price tag as unnecessarily high given what you get. The cars are not known for their handling or acceleration, although they can go 80 miles per hour if necessary. The website Treehugger.com suggests that eco-conscious consumers might do better spending their $12,000 on a conventional sub-compact or compact car, many which get equivalent if not better gas mileage not to mention likely faring better in a crash.

But for those who need a great in-city car for short errands and commutes, today's ForTwo might be just the ticket. Environmentalists are hoping Smart will release the higher mileage diesel version of the ForTwo, which has been available in Europe for several years, in the U.S. soon. And they are keeping their fingers crossed for a hybrid version which could give the hugely successful Toyota Prius—which looks almost huge in comparison—a run for its money in terms of fuel efficiency and savings at the pump.

DEAR EARTHTALK: There seems to be a large selection of soy and other non-dairy milks out there today, even right in the dairy sections of major supermarkets. Why should I opt for soymilk over cow's milk and how do I get the calcium I would lose?—Barbara Conant, Tacoma, Wash.

There is a lot of debate about whether or not cow's milk is good—or appropriate—for people at all. On the plus side, it is a valuable source of protein, as well as calcium, necessary to help build bones and keep them strong. Some researchers believe that drinking cow's milk reduces the risk of kidney stones, colon cancer and other health problems. But others counter that the saturated fats in cow's milk are big contributors to America's weight problems, let alone high cholesterol levels and artery blockage.

Famed pediatrician Dr. Benjamin Spock, in the last edition of his best selling "Common Sense Book of Baby and Child Care," argued that cow's milk was for baby cows not human children, suggesting that it may be a factor in childhood onset diabetes and in kids' respiratory and ear problems. He encouraged mothers to give infants only human breast milk and to consider soy and rice milk products for older kids.

Chief among available alternatives to cow's milk is soymilk, which has about the same amount of protein but much more fiber than cow's milk. In striking contrast with cow's milk, soymilk actually reduces the body's cholesterol levels. It also contains isoflavones, natural plant hormones that act as antioxidants and have been linked to many human health benefits including the easing of menopause symptoms, protection against prostate problems, better bone health and even a reduction in heart disease and cancer risks.

Many people assume that soymilk has less calcium than cow's milk, which is true—in its pure form, soymilk has only a sixth of the calcium of an equal amount of cow's milk. But producers address this problem by simply fortifying soymilks with calcium to equal the amount in cow's milk. And studies have shown that most people's bodies absorb 75 percent more calcium from soymilk than from cow's milk.

But while the health benefits of soymilk are substantial, it may not be for everyone. Dr. Joseph Mercola, who runs one of the most highly trafficked natural health websites, warns that soymilk can inhibit thyroid performance, so those with pre-existing thyroid issues might want to avoid it. Also, some researchers have shown that soymilk can inhibit the body's absorption of protein and minerals in some cases.

Other tasty and healthy alternatives to cow's milk include those made from rice, almonds, oats—and even hemp. According to the health and wellness website Sixwise.com, almond milk is rich in magnesium, potassium, manganese, copper, the antioxidants vitamin E and selenium, and calcium and "may be one of the more nutritious milk alternatives on the market." It is very low in calories and contains no cholesterol. Rice milk, Sixwise reports, is mainly a source of carbohydrates, and should not be considered a nutritional replacement for cow's milk, though it is "a useful replacement for milk for taste and cooking purposes."

Hemp milk, which is made from the seeds of hemp plants but contains none of the psychoactive ingredients in marijuana, can be a good source of protein, calcium, omega fatty acids and other vitamins and minerals. Another good alternative is oat milk, which is high in fiber, free of cholesterol and lactose, and contains vitamin E, folic acid, and other healthy elements and minerals.
