If you fail to file a Response in this case, any or all of the matters above, or any related matters which come before this Court, may be decided without further notice to you.

This is an action to obtain a Decree of: Dissolution of Marriage or Legal Separation as more fully described in the attached Petition, and if you have children, for orders regarding the children of the marriage.

Notice: §14-10-107, C.R.S. provides that upon the filing of a Petition for Dissolution of Marriage or Legal Separation by the Petitioner and Co-Petitioner, or upon personal service of the Petition and Summons on the Respondent, or upon waiver and acceptance of service by the Respondent, an automatic temporary injunction shall be in effect against both parties until the Final Decree is entered, or the Petition is dismissed, or until further Order of the Court. Either party may apply to the Court for further temporary orders, an expanded temporary injunction, or modification or revocation under §14-10-108, C.R.S. or any other appropriate statute.

A request for genetic tests shall not prejudice the requesting party in matters concerning allocation of parental responsibilities pursuant to §14-10-124(1.5), C.R.S. If genetic tests are not obtained prior to a legal establishment of paternity and submitted into evidence prior to the entry of the final decree of dissolution or legal separation, the genetic tests may not be allowed into evidence at a later date.

Automatic Temporary Injunction —By Order of Colorado Law, You and Your Spouse are:

1.) Restrained from transferring, encumbering, concealing or in any way disposing of, without the consent of the other party or an Order of the Court, any marital property, except in the usual course of business or for the necessities of life. Each party is required to notify the other party of any proposed extraordinary expenditures and to account to the Court for all extraordinary expenditures made after the injunction is in effect;

2.) Enjoined from molesting or disturbing the peace of the other party;

3.) Restrained from removing the minor children of the parties, if any, from the State without the consent of the other party or an Order of the Court; and

4.) State Department of Wildlife monitoring bats for deadly fungus

ColoWildlife 2/15—As Indiana and North Carolina in the last week announced finding white-nose syndrome in bats in their states, the Colorado Division of Wildlife is stepping up monitoring efforts here at home. The agency is inspecting bat hibernation sites this winter looking for the presence of a deadly fungus that leads to massive bat die-offs.

“Bats are an important yet under-appreciated part of our world and this threat is something we should all be worried about,” said Tina Jackson, a Species Conservation Coordinator for the Division of Wildlife.

White-nose syndrome, which is caused by a fungus known as Geomyces destructans, is responsible for large-scale bat die-offs in the Eastern United States. In the four years since it was first discovered, white-nose syndrome is responsible for the death of more than one million bats.

White-nose syndrome is named for the white, powder-like material seen on the nose, ears, and wings of infected bats. It is believed to have originated in Europe. Some bats in Europe, subjected to the fungus for many years, may have developed immunities that bats in North America don't possess. Without any natural protections, white-nose syndrome can wipe out 95 percent of a bat colony in a couple of years. It has been predicted that white-nose syndrome could eliminate little brown bats in the north-eastern US within 16 years.

White-nose syndrome has not been found in Colorado. Since being first documented in 2007 in a cave in New York, white-nose syndrome has spread to 16 states and 2 Canadian provinces. In 2010, a cave in northwestern Oklahoma and less than 200 miles from the Colorado border tested positive for the fungus.

Scientists speculate that the fungus jumped from Europe to the US through human transmission. They also believe that a large jump from the East Coast to a cave in Oklahoma was probably someone who had explored an infected cave and then traveled west with the fungus on clothing or equipment.

“Once the fungus arrives in an area, it can spread quickly as bats move,” said Jackson. “But the fungus makes the biggest leaps in distance when it moves because of human activity.”

Scientists are still learning about white-nose syndrome but it is believed to take advantage of bats during hibernation. The immune system of a hibernating bat effectively shuts down, allowing the fungus to become established. Bats in colonies infected with white-nose syndrome seem to arouse from hibernation more frequently than uninfected populations, possibly because of irritation, hunger or thirst. The increased number of arousals from hibernation quickly depletes the bat's fat reserves and results in starvation. The fungus also causes damage to the wings affecting the health of the bat and perhaps compromising the ability to fly and capture insects.

Colorado is home to at least 18 species of bats, 13 of which are believed to hibernate in the state. Bats that migrate to warmer climates for the winter are not believed to be effected by white-nose syndrome. All the bat species found in Colorado are insect eaters, in some cases eating thousands of insects a night. This diet of night flying insects makes bats important for the control of agricultural and human pests. Bats are also important to the cave environments they roost in, bringing energy into these mostly closed systems in the form of their guano.

The public is asked to not disturb hibernating bats and to respect cave closures. The US Forest Service has closed all caves on its lands in Colorado and several surrounding states in order to prevent the spread of the fungus. While the public is asked to avoid going near bat caves, people are being asked to report if they see any signs of white-nose syndrome. Signs include:

- Bats moving to the openings of the hibernation site during the winter
- Bats leaving hibernation sites in the winter, especially on cold days
- Bats with a white powder-like material on their nose, ears or wings
- Dead bats

Hibernating bats sought...
The Division of Wildlife would also like to know of any sites, especially in eastern Colorado, that have hibernating bats so biologists can include them in the monitoring effort.

“Information from the public will be critical to our effort this year,” said Bob Davies, Wildlife Disease Manager.

Members of the public who see any active or dead bats this winter are asked to report that information to a special phone line (303-291-7771) or e-mail address (Wildlife.Batline@state.co.us). Because bats also can be affected by other health problems, including rabies, people should use precautions such as disposable gloves or an inverted plastic bag when handling bat carcasses. The public is also advised not handle live bats that appear to be ill.

Now is the time for kids to get second flu vaccination

ColoHealth 2/15—State influenza experts Tuesday reminded parents that now is the time to get their younger children a second dose of flu vaccine if they fall into the category of children needing two doses this season.

Children aged 6 months through 8 years should receive two doses of influenza vaccine the first time they ever receive a flu vaccination, separated by at least four weeks. In addition, if that child received only one dose the first year they were vaccinated, he or she should receive two doses the next flu season to allow their bodies to build full immunity.

Children 6 months through 8 years of age needing two doses of flu vaccine include those who:

- were not immunized for flu prior to the 2009-2010 season;
- received fewer than two doses of the flu vaccine last season; and
- didn't receive a 2009 H1N1 vaccination.

Joni Reynolds, director of the Immunization Program at the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment, said, “Many young children do not receive a second dose of influenza vaccine, leaving them vulnerable to flu and complications from the flu. People often underestimate the severity of the illness and the impact flu can have on their child's health and their own health. It's a good time for parents to get their children the second dose of flu vaccine if they haven't done so.”

During this flu season, 340 hospitalizations from influenza have been reported in Colorado from 33 counties. Although this year's flu season is considered to be “mild-to-moderate” according to state surveillance experts, flu cases are increasing in Colorado and nationally.

“Influenza is circulating, sickening many people, and will continue to circulate in Colorado, and nationally, for the next couple of months. It's a good time for everyone to get their flu vaccination,” said Reynolds.

In addition to the flu vaccination, Reynolds encouraged Coloradans to practice good hygiene to prevent the spread of flu by frequently washing their hands, covering their cough and staying home when sick. To find a flu clinic, visit www.immunizecolorado.com or call 1-877-462-2911.

City-County Health hosts commercial recycling session

C-CH 2/17—The Pueblo City-County Health Department is hosting a class for businesses to better understand commercial recycling options in the Pueblo area. The free class will be held on Thursday, February 24 from 10:00am-noon at the Pueblo City-County Health Department (101 W. 9th Street) on the third floor. Attendees will learn about reuse options for businesses and recycling items from batteries and plastic to paint and fluorescent bulbs. All businesses will receive a free recycling kit for 4-foot and 8-foot fluorescent bulbs.

Implementing an effective waste reduction and recycling program in your business does not have to be difficult or expensive, advises the department. Businesses can save money through recycling efforts and “green” procurement practices as well as increase public relations. Businesses will learn about new regulations and what they can and cannot throw away.

For more information and to RSVP, call the Recycle Hotline at 583-4924.
