Speaks out on recent 'Frontline' episode—

Independent bank official states need to break up too-big-to-fail institutions

ICBa 1/24) — Camden R. Fine, president and CEO of the Independent Community Bankers of America (ICBA), on Thursday said that it's high time to restore sanity and accountability in our financial system and that too-big-to-fail firms should be downsized and split up. Fine's comments are a direct reaction to this week's episode of "Frontline," which shines a light on possible reasons why the executives running the nation's largest financial firms who sank our economy and received billions in taxpayer assistance have not been held accountable.

Fine said that the most alarming parts of the piece include revelations that the Justice Department has been hesitant to advance criminal charges because prosecutors are concerned about the impact of lawsuits on large financial institutions.

In the episode which aired on Tuesday night, the assistant attorney general of the Justice Department's criminal division acknowledges that he lost sleep at night worrying about the economic fallout that a lawsuit at a large financial institution might create. He said that he felt a responsibility to engage regulators and other experts and to consider the overall impact on the industry, implying that he took that into account in making decisions regarding indictment.

"If this isn't a textbook definition of the problem of too-big-to-fail, I don't know what is. These financial firms are so large and so interconnected that they not only have access to lower-cost funding and to a seemingly limitless taxpayer backstop, but they are also immune from criminal prosecution," Fine said.

"Have we come to a point where we truly have people who are above the law? Are we willing to accept that they are too big to jail? These individuals wrecked our financial system and have been allowed to walk away, bonus checks in hand, like nothing happened, leaving community banks to pick up the pieces under the weight of crushing laws and regulations enacted to halt such reprehensible behavior," he said.

Fine says he has been a strong voice in the too-big-to-fail debate since the onset of the financial crisis because, as a former community banker, he realizes firsthand how the actions of too-big-to-fail firms can affect Main Street community banks and the communities they serve.

ICBA as an association has also long advocated for the restructuring of too-big-to-fail firms because of the risks they pose to the nation's community banks, financial system and economy as a whole.

Just last week the association said it strongly supported Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas President and CEO Richard Fisher's call to restructure too-big-to-fail financial institutions to reduce risks to the financial system. ICBA also recently thanked the Government Accountability Office for agreeing to study potential market distortions caused by too-big-to-fail financial institutions. The study, requested by Sens. David Vitter (R-La.) and Sherrod Brown (D-Ohio), would focus on financial institutions with more than $500 billion in consolidated assets.

Chicago's Famed Second City comes to CSU-Pueblo

CSU-P 1/22)—Chicago's legendary sketch comedy theatre, The Second City: Laughing Matters, will appear at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 1 in Colorado State University-Pueblo's Hoag Recital Hall, featuring some of the best sketches, songs, and improvisations from The Second City's 50-plus-year history. The Second City is truly a Chicago landmark and a national treasure.

With economic uncertainty, political gridlock and a dearth of Khardashians clogging up our televisions, laughing has never mattered more, and The Second City is here to bring some well needed silliness and hilarious spontaneity to a world in need of some comic relief. The Second City: Laughing Matters puts comedy first in a wickedly funny revue that skewers and celebrates in equal doses.

The Second City celebrates more than 50 years of cutting edge satiric revues and continues to deliver the leading voices in comedy while touring the globe. With scripted and improvisational elements, audiences always enjoy being part of the show and playing along with the next generation of comic legends. Whether it's ripped from the morning headlines or a classic gem from their 50 year archives, The Second City is always a laugh out loud hit.

Founded in Chicago in 1959, The Second City has become the premier training ground for the comedy world's best and brightest. Its alumni list reads like a who's who of American comedy, including Dan Aykroyd, Bill Murray, Joan Rivers, Robert Klein, Peter Boyle, Harold Ramis, John Belushi, Gilda Radner, Martin Short, John Candy, Shelley Long, Chris Farley, Mike Myers, and Tina Fey.

Admission is free to CSU-

Pueblo students, faculty, staff, and the community. However, seating is limited, on a first-come, first-served basis, and thus not guaranteed. Parents should be strongly advised that this performance is not recommended for children as The Second City uses strong language and sexually explicit content.

Some Suggestions for Improving Congress

By Lee H. Hamilton

A few weeks ago, the survey firm Public Policy Polling made headlines when it released a poll comparing Congress's standing to a variety of unloved things. Respondents did prefer our national legislature to the ebola virus, but otherwise the news was grim: Americans, the survey suggested, have a lower opinion of Congress than of head lice, Genghis Khan, used-car salesmen, and root canals.

I'll admit it: I chuckled, though I don't really agree. Having experienced both, I put Congress well ahead of root canals.

Still, in the years since I left Capitol Hill my frustration with the institution I admired and loved has grown; watching it now is painful. Congress has shown a dispiriting unwillingness to reckon with tax reform, rein in the deficit, find ways to spur economic growth or make any of the other tough decisions that face it. When it does make a decision, it tends to limit its reach — thus, over and over, avoiding the real issues.

Its constant partisanship, lack of urgency in the face of looming fiscal threats, posturing and finger-pointing even at moments when the national interest clearly demands a resolution — all these have made it appear uninterested in actually governing.

Yet people do not run for Congress so they can become unpopular. They don't go to Washington because they want to accomplish nothing. They don't take the oath of office, surrounded by reminders of the distinguished men and women who came before them, just to disavow Congress's rich history of accomplishment.

Rather, they get caught in a destructive cycle whose dynamics are often shaped by political forces out of their control — by the demands of party loyalty or the arm-twisting of caucus leaders, by the threats and blandishments of special interests or the fear of well-funded opposition in the next primary. The challenge facing members of Congress is to rise above all this, to find a way to reassert the values and aspirations that first brought them to national office.

How can they do this? I'm convinced that it comes down to attitude.

To begin, they have to put the country first. Not their party or their re-election or their political ambitions, but the nation's best interest. The surest way I know to earn the respect of voters is to put responsible governance first.

In part, this means acting with the future in mind. Thomas Jefferson in his first inaugural address looked toward "our descendants to the thousandth and the thousandth generation." That may be a longer time-frame than is politically realistic, but at the moment I'd even settle for just the thousandth and the thousandth day, which is more far-sighted than most members' obsession with the next election. Americans care about their country's future, and they want their representatives to do so, too.

This means that members of Congress need to accept responsibility for resolving the nation's challenges, whether they're in the majority or in the minority. Our country simply cannot survive the current reluctance to meet our problems head on or Capitol Hill's tolerance for the sort of brinksmanship that leaves the nation on tenterhooks and difficult issues put off for another day.

Members have a responsibility to make the government work, and they need to square their shoulders and step up to it: to make decisions, to vote on the issues that need addressing — rather than on legislation designed to give them political cover or to pander to deep-pocketed interests — and to move the country forward.

To do this, they will have to work out their differences — through skillful negotiation, patience, understanding, accommodation, and compromise. Being a member does not mean treating adversaries as enemies to be defeated and humiliated; they are colleagues with whom one must cooperate on the larger goal of searching for a remedy to the challenges that beset the country. Focusing on the facts — rather than on scoring ideological points — and working together to build consensus based on those facts is the only way our representatives will be able to take on the responsibilities Americans expect of them.

That is what Americans are looking for. And that is what Congress needs to deliver if it wants to be more popular than root canals.
