Study shows Colo. gender wage gap costs women over $7.1 billion a year

NPW&F 4/11) - On average, Colorado women employed full time, year round are paid just 82 cents for every dollar paid to men - a yearly pay gap of $9,208, according to a new analysis conducted by the National Partnership for Women & Families (NPW), based in Washington D.C.

NPW says that means, in total, women in Colorado lose more than $7.1 billion every year, which is money that could strengthen the state economy and the financial security of Colorado's women and families, including the more than 210,000 Colorado households headed by women. These are some of the findings of the study.

The analysis spans all 50 states, all 435 congressional districts in the country, and the District of Columbia. It can be found at NationalPartnership.org/Gap. These findings for Colorado include that, for every dollar paid to white, non-Hispanic men in Colorado, African American women, Latinas and Asian women who work full time, year round are paid 64 cents, 54 cents and 70 cents, respectively.

"This analysis is a sobering reminder of the serious harm the wage gap causes women and families all across the country," said Debra L. Ness, president of the National Partnership.

According to the new analysis, if the gap between women's and men's wages in Colorado were eliminated, each woman who holds a full-time, year-round job in the state could afford to buy food for 1.3 more years, pay for mortgage and utilities for six more months, or pay rent for nine more months. Basic necessities like these would be particularly important for the 24 percent of Colorado's woman-headed households currently living below the poverty level.

Colorado is not the only state with a wage gap. In fact, every state and 98 percent of the country's congressional districts have one. The National Partnership's national analysis finds that the 10 states with the largest cents-on-the-dollar wage gaps in the country - from largest to smallest - are Louisiana, Utah, Wyoming, West Virginia, North Dakota, Alabama, Idaho, Oklahoma, Montana and Michigan.

Nationally, women who are employed full time, year round are paid, on average, 79 cents for every dollar paid to men. The gap is larger for African American women and Latinas who are paid 60 cents and 55 cents, respectively, for every dollar paid to white, non-Hispanic men. For Asian women in the United States, the gap is smaller but persists. On average, Asian women are paid 84 cents for every dollar paid to white, non-Hispanic men, although some ethnic subgroups fare much worse.

According to NPW, the Paycheck Fairness Act currently before Congress would close loopholes in the Equal Pay Act, help to break patterns of pay discrimination, and establish stronger workplace protections for women.
